Those charities who have illegal protests against mining should have their DGR revoked. Why should the taxpayer subsidise these groups who are aiming to ruin our economy by destroying the mining industry, a mainstay of the Australian economy. Most of these protestors must on social security otherwise why aren't they working? Shame on Australia to pay them to do this and then also subsidise them since they claim to be a charity. I cannot understand why Australia has so many disruptive charities there is something wrong here! Indeed the number of registered charities is totally out of control all at the poor taxpayers peril.
