Dear Sir/ Madam,

It is very important to allow donations made to environment conservation groups to be tax deductible.

I urge you to be fair, and allow donations to environment conservation groups to be tax deductible. These groups should be able to choose to advocate for environmental protection.

I personally donate to the Mackay Conservation Group, to support its work in the protection and rehabilitation of the environment, and in monitoring companies to ensure the companies comply with laws in relation to environmental Responsibility's. This group does a very important job in the interests of all Australians, such as reporting when companies are illegally contaminating the waterways that we all depend on. I believe churches also have a tax deductible donations status, and groups such as Mackay Conservation Group help even more Australian people in an even more physical way in regard to protecting the health of us all, no matter who we are.

The lobbying of mining groups to stop donations to these groups from being tax deductible blatantly shows they want to try and suppress the ability of these groups to speak up for Australians that want somebody to check they are following the laws in regards to environmental Responsibility's.

Thankyou for your time,
Yours Sincerely,
