Submission Stability - Addressing too-big-to-fail

Sir,

I provide this supplement 6 as I view it is relevant to matters I referred to previously.

It should be clear that there is an ongoing escalating concern as to the secrecy that is going on and removed in that regard accountability if banks can get involved in unlawful conduct and then customers and shareholders are to be burdened with a "Bail in" where they are denied scrutiny. Clearly, there is a basic defect within the Parliament failing to provide legislation to seek to avoid such issues as now is before the bank and to ensure criminal conduct can be appropriately dealt with to prevent such kind of conduct.

All the Parliament is doing so far is to have disregarded the very basic principles of the constitution, and allowing reckless gambling by banks, and the GFC was a clear example of it.

This must stop!

No "Basil in" and no "Bail out" but provide appropriate legislation that the moment anyone of the bank so to say set a foot wrong then they shall face severe legal consequences. That in my view is but the only appropriate manner to seek to prevent misuse and abuse of monies by the banks.

 Subject: Australians Deserve To Know the Truth About Government Corruption

According to Wikileaks, the Australian Supreme Court has issued a blanket order forbidding media organisations from revealing the bribery of government officials.

In June, seven senior members of Australian banks were indicted on corruption charges concerning high-level government officials of other nations. Yet the Australian public heard nothing about it -- because the government forbade media outlets from publishing any details about the case.

<http://www.care2.com/go/z/e/AltBL/zpie/czQ4u>

According to Wikileaks, news outlets across Australia have been prohibited to report the allegations or even name the people involved in the case.

Wikileaks publisher Julian Assange describes the gag order as "unprecedented" in scope. These revelations also suggest that the government could be prohibiting the release of vital information to Australian citizens on a regular basis -- information that we deserve to know and hold our elected leaders accountable for.

The Australian press needs to have the ability to tell its people the truth about the country's policies, even if that truth may be uncomfortable for some people to hear. Tell the government to stop suppressing information through media gag orders!
