

How dare the Australian Government expect the households of everyday Australians to have their savings stolen from them by the banks. HOW ABOUT MAKING THESE REVOLTING BANKS BECOME RESPONSIBLE FOR THEIR OWN STUPIDITY AND INSOLVENCY? But oh no, lets make the lives of everyday Australians harder - with all the increases in petrol, taxes, electricity, etc, let's take all their savings too. You make me sick. And if you think Australians will stand by and let their money be stolen by the banks, you're going to get a very big shock. Australians will rebel, and revolt.

I demand a Glass-Steagall separation of banking instead. Let those banks who wish to gamble their money away become fully responsible for their own actions. If they lose it, tough. But everyday deposits of everyday Australians are fully protected AND RIGHTLY SO.

If any politician thinks that big business banks can steal their clients money like what happened in Cyprus, they lack intelligence. If politicians think it's OK for Australia to become like Cyprus so that businesses can't operate and pay their employees, bills, and for riots, to occur, then they are not Australian, and certainly not working in Australia's best interests. If any politician is so concerned about the gambling of big banks, then they can offer the big banks their own income and assets to the detriment of their family and themselves, if they think the big banks are so important. They're not getting my money/savings.
