

Banking Access

It is my belief that a lot of Australian citizens are being disadvantaged with the current banking monopolies.

I must therefore express my belief that Australians deserve more banking integrity and assistance from banking institutions.

Government regulators and banking institutions should be changing practices to accommodate the needs of Australian citizens, not Australian citizens changing practices to make it easier or more profitable for banks.

I advocate an Australia Post Bank.

It is my view that this would give back banking convenience to the citizens of Australia. A convenience that has been systematically and methodically stripped away from the banking landscape here in Australia.

Yours in Solidarity David James Cox.
